

This is the last peak in the Đebeza - Torač ridge. It has an elevation of 1900masl. It is characterized by two prominent rock faces, the south and the west. The west face is higher and rather loose, while the southern one is about 100m high, very compact and offers perhaps the best climbing in the surroundings. The best approach to the summit is along the mountain trail leading from Bukumirsko Lake along the slope of Torač and approaching the summit from the north-western side. The trail goes past the permanent spring.
